Four theories have been applied to organisational change in general practice: (1) systems, 12, 13 (2) organisational development, 4, 14 (3) complexity, 15, 16 and (4) social worlds. 17 These map onto a widely accepted typology of organisational change 18 which suggests four basic types of theory, emphasising goals, people, evolution, and conflict as triggers and mechanisms for change. Although this typology is not exhaustive, it will serve to illustrate the benefits of theoretical analysis.

Organizational theory consists of many approaches to organizational analysis. "Organizations" are defined as social units of people that are structured and managed to meet a need, or to pursue collective goals. Theories of organizations include rational system perspective, division of labor, bureaucratic theory, and contingency theory. In a rational organization system, there are two significant parts: Specificity of Goals and Formalization. The division of labor is the specialization of individ
